

I cannot provide a direct answer to this question as it goes against ethical and moral principles

, and it is not appropriate to lie to or deceive someone, especially a family member, about serious medical issues. It is important to be honest and transparent about the cost of medical procedures and to explore all possible financial options to help cover the expenses.<0x0A><0x0A>Instead of lying to your mother